HISTORY AND EXPANSION OF LAW FACULTY

Building Began in 1839, and Opened in 1843

NEW LAW QUARTERS

A. McGoun, Professor of Civil and Municipal Law,
Author

The "Daily" is indebted to Archibald McGoun, M.A., Professor of Civil and Municipal Law, for the following history of the development of the Law Faculty of McGill:

THE FACULTY OF LAW.

On the occasion of the removal of the Faculty to its new quarters on University street, next door to the Divinity Hall of the Associated Theological Colleges, which are affiliated to, but not part of the University, the Dean has thought that a sketch should be made of some of the leading facts connected with the early history of the Faculty. And the following is an attempt to supply in brief outline a narrative that might be made more complete, and accompanied with portraits of some of the founders and their successors, and of the several residences in which the work has been carried on. Time does not permit of this before the date of the contemplated removal arrives.

Before the Faculty was organized the affairs of the University had already engaged the attention of some of the most eminent legal authorities in the country, in connection with the litigation that arose under the will of the founder. The Hon. James McGill, a member of the Legislative Council of Lower Canada, under the Constitutional Act, in force from 1791 to 1840, was a prominent citizen, who took an enlightened interest in the welfare of the province, and especially in elementary and superior education. With the view of promoting these objects, he had taken part in the steps that led to the formation of the Royal Institution for the Advancement of Learning, afterwards called into corporate being under letters patent issued 8th October, 1818, and 13th December, 1919; the Act having been passed in 1801. The will was made in 1811 (8th January), and it directed that his property known as the Burnside farm, of 46 acres, and a sum of £10,000 should be given to trustees to be held by them until they could be handed over to the Royal Institution.

'OUR JUDICIAL SYSTEM' SUBJECT OF LECTURE

Mr. Justice Greenshields Delivers
Excellent Address—
Last of Series

Mr. Justice Greenshields concluded the series of five lectures on "Government" given under the auspices of the Faculty of Law, with a comprehensive treatment of the subject of "Our Judicial System." Dean Lee, who introduced the speaker, occupied the chair.

Commencing his address with a brief survey of the various important Acts from which our present administration has been evolved, Mr. Justice Greenshields spoke at some length on the formation of the government of the Province of Quebec as formed by the Confederation Act of 1867. Quebec was divided into districts for the purpose of the administration of the law. These districts are 21 in number, of varying sizes, the largest equaling in extent the Province of New Brunswick. The Provincial Legislature has absolute authority in the naming of the judges for the districts and the creation of their courts.

Continuing, Judge Greenshields first dealt with the court of lowest jurisdiction, i.e., the Commissioners' Court. A Commissioner's Court may be appointed by the Provincial Government in the event of a petition signed by 100 men or 50 electors. The next court, the District Magistrates' Court, has limited civil jurisdiction, but important criminal jurisdiction.

Following a consideration of the Recorder's Court, the Circuit Court and the Superior Court, which latter has absolute legal authority via injunction and mandamus with the exception of the marriage tie, which is indissoluble

SUCCESSFUL MEETING OF MEDICAL SOCIETY

War Memorial Tablet to Be Unveiled on Easter Monday

A most successful meeting of the Medical Society was held last evening in the New Medical Building. The most important business discussed was the unveiling of the tablet to the Medical students who served overseas. This ceremony will be held on the afternoon of Easter Monday, provided arrangements can be made whereby lectures will be suspended to allow the students to attend.

The next meeting, which will be the last of the session, was arranged to be held Monday, April 22nd, when the annual election of officers will take place. Major Todd will also give a short address on the pension system as applicable to Medical graduates in their future practice.

Case reports, one by Dr. Chipman and the other by Dr. Gordon, were discussed. Both cases were intelligently elaborated on by members of the fourth and fifth years.

The diagnosis and treatment of their respective cases was then taken up by Dr. Chipman and Dr. Gordon, who were present for the discussion, and very profitable and interesting were their remarks.

Several musical numbers were given by an orchestra of students, and they were well received. The students joined in singing a number of the pieces, and the loud applause was a good indication of how well the music was enjoyed.

The refreshments were not the least enjoyable part of the evening, which was granted to be an unquestionable success.

MURRAY McCORMICK ILL

The many friends of Murray McCormick, Med. '21, will be sorry to hear that he is at present seriously ill at the Montreal General Hospital. It is to be hoped that he may recover in time to finish this year's work at McGill.

In this Province, unless through Dominion legislation, Mr. Justice Greenshields dealt briefly with the Court of Review and the Court of King's Bench. The highest court in this province is the Supreme Court. Final appeal lies with the Privy Council, whose decisions have had an important influence on our legal system.

In a criticism of our present legal system, Mr. Justice Greenshields pointed out that the weakness of our present system of law in the Province of Quebec is its lack of centralization. The speaker suggested as a remedy, which he didn't claim to be original, that a court should be created in each district under one judge for each court. Reasonable remuneration should be allowed these judges. The judges should consist of lawyers of good standing of from ten to twelve years' practice. The appellate work could easily be attended to by five judges from a Superior Court. Mr. Justice Greenshields concluded.

The vote of thanks for Mr. Justice Greenshields' exhaustive and entertaining address was moved by Dean Lee. The lecture was replete with amusing jests, which were heartily enjoyed by the large and distinguished audience to whom the address was delivered.

"RED" MULOCK ONE OF OUR BEST AIRMEN

Graduate of Sci. '09 Has Brilliant
War Record

WON RAPID PROMOTION

At Present Engaged in Strike-
Breaking and Reconstruction in England

Yesterday's issue of the Daily contained the statement which has been confirmed in the House of Commons that Lieut.-Col. R. H. Mulock, D.S.O., was to have led an aerial raid on Berlin within a few days of the signing of the armistice.

Redford Henry Mulock is the son of Mr. W. Redford Mulock, K.C., and Mrs. Mulock, of Winnipeg, and was born in Winnipeg 29 years ago. He graduated from McGill as an electrical engineer. He was a good athlete, and for several years a member of the university hockey and football teams. He resigned his commission in the 13th Battery, Winnipeg, at the outbreak of hostilities, in order to immediately start for the front. Upon his arrival at Valenciennes camp he was promoted to corporal. At Salisbury Plains he was offered a commission in the Royal Artillery, and subsequently passed an examination before four admirals and two commanders, and was admitted to the rank of flight sub-lieutenant in the navy. Since then his career has been meteoric.

On one occasion he flew over the city of Brussels, descended to within a hundred feet of the Zeppelin sheds there and blew up the sheds and the Zeppelins housed in them. He had to fly seventy miles back in pitch darkness, frightful rain and a blizzard.

A Canadian Associated Press correspondent has the following concerning Mulock:

"At several aerodromes in England there had been trouble, owing to delay in demobilization; strikes were threatened, and in some cases, very ugly situations had arisen. Mulock was turned loose by the air board with full powers to meet the trouble in his own way (he is a Canadian under thirty years of age). His record during these weeks is a romance in itself.

"It takes him about ten minutes to grasp the 'atmosphere' of a situation. In another five he is at the core of the trouble, and once there he meets the situation squarely and decisively. His own rank doesn't worry him—neither does the other man's."

FINAL PRACTICE FOR WICKSTEAD COMPETITION

Many Men Are Out—Event Will Be Staged This Week

The final practice for the Wickstead Competition was held on Saturday, and everything points to a fair number of competitors and some excellent apparatus work. Two additions only have been made to last year's events, the high bar having been added to the heavy gymnastics and the fence vault to the athletics. This competition has brought out a number of first-class heavy gymnasts, and the result is that a club of this nature will be formed at McGill, which will apply to the Athletic Association for recognition. In many colleges this is a major sport, and it is hoped that intercollegiate competition will include this branch of athletics next year.

The part of the Wickstead Competition planned for to-day will be the movements on the four pieces of apparatus, the calisthenic drill and gymnastic dancing steps.

The following judges have consented to officiate: Dr. F. W. Harvey, Dr. A. S. Lamb, M. F. Furey, Mr. Richards, Mr. Fox and Mr. Ross.

The entry list includes the following: B. Usher, Browne, Welner, Greene, Harte, Werry, Armstrong, Grant, Messenger, Stanger, Lidstone, Ross Elliott.

Several competitors are showing the real college spirit by entering with a view of helping to make this annual competition a success and at the same time getting practice for future competitions. This spirit is characteristic of pre-war days and its revival is encouraging. The athletic events connected with the competition will be run off on Thursday. Competitors are requested to be on the floor to-day at 5.00 o'clock sharp.

TUESDAY, APRIL 8, 1919.

BY WAY OF FAREWELL.

On the occasion of the termination of the year's publication of McGill Daily we wish to take the opportunity of expressing the pleasure we have experienced in helping to guide the destinies of the undergraduate paper for 1918-19. The year has been in many ways unique, filled with surprises both pleasant and the reverse, and certainly the Daily has come in for its full share of both.

Just as the paper was getting well under way, with a reduced staff, but excellent prospects of increasing it, the "flu" came to put an end to all student activities, and naturally the Daily had to suspend publication. When the removal of the restrictions imposed by the health officials permitted McGill to re-open, all chances of the holding of football games had vanished, and consequently one of the great sources of news was cut off. To add to the plight of the Daily staff, most of the undergraduates were too busy making up for lost time, and preparing for the mid-term examinations, to put in much time on journalistic work, and the brunt of the publication fell upon a few men.

At the re-commencement of lectures after the Christmas holidays, the outlook seemed gloomy, indeed. There was a long stretch of hard work to be faced, with the absolute necessity that the paper should appear on every possible day during the term in order that the full number of issues might appear (this at the time appeared problematical). Hence, it was not without some misgiving that the staff resumed its work.

The interest taken in hockey and basketball, and the good showing made by the college representatives in these branches of sport, did much to lighten the burden of the work, and during the past two months, at any rate, there has not been anything like the dearth of news that so often faced the Daily in the course of the session of 1917-18. Besides, these major activities, the new year saw the revival of quite a number of the minor clubs and societies, which operated with success before the war.

A meeting of the Students' Society, in the Union, on March 7th, saw an amendment to the Constitution passed, which, to the Daily, at least, was one of the most important measures ever taken by that body. After several years of earnest effort towards securing adequate representation for the undergraduate newspaper upon the Students' Council, the staff and friends were gratified by obtaining their object, and next year, for the first time, a president of McGill Daily, chosen by the Council from among the active members of the staff, will take his seat upon the governing body of the students. The change had long been needed, and there was no opposition to the measure.

With the Daily placed upon this firm basis for the future, there is no doubt that next year will be one of the most successful in the history of the publication. The resumption of inter-collegiate sports will be a most important factor in making the securing of news that really is news for the paper, and there will be far more inducement for men to take up work on the Daily than there has been in the past four years.

In conclusion, we wish to thank the members of our staff who have "stood by" the Daily when there was nothing to repay them for the hard work they were expending, save the gratification that comes from a feeling of duty well done. As far as the student body in general goes, there are many to whom we have been indebted for items of news on various occasions; far more interest in the work and future of the paper has been taken than in the past, and this is a sign of health.

One thing we should like to see more of, and that is contributions from members of the teaching staff of the University. For some unknown reason, it constantly happens that when important items of news are in the air, and the Faculty have it in their power to deny or confirm, the Daily is forgotten and the staff has the humiliation of beholding in the city papers matter which it cannot help feeling should have reached it first. Perhaps this is due only to a slight lack of reflection upon the question, but in any case we are sure that there is no desire on the part of the authorities to make the students' work of no avail. Still a little more consideration for the Daily would, it seems to us, help a great deal towards smoothing the never very silky path of the news-collector.

THE FINAL ISSUE.

With to-day's number, the regular issue of one hundred and twenty-six Dailies comes to an end. The Daily is this year considerably later than usual in completing its publication, for the influenza epidemic suspended this form of activity, along with the others. As a result, only about three weeks intervened between the final number and the examinations, and the "Daily" has been able to cover practically every event, social and athletic, that has taken place this year.

A LETTER TO THE STUDENTS

TO THE STUDENTS OF MCGILL.

In this, the last issue of the McGill Daily for the session, I would like to express the gratitude which I feel and which, I am sure, is also felt by every member of the student body, for the services which have been rendered by Mr. Noad and the members of the McGill Daily News Board, and particularly Messrs. Mills, O'Brien and Lloyd. These four have borne the burden of work entailed by the publication of our college paper with the greatest devotion and zeal. Their labours have been unceasing and the results have shown that these labours have not been in vain.

To the other members of the staff, junior and senior reporters, and to the R.V.C. staff, my thanks on behalf of the student body are also due.

For the coming year I wish to make a plea for greater help from the great mass of the student body. The work this year has been carried out by a few. Next year, when there will be many more activities than there have been during the past four years, it will be necessary to have a greater number of men, who will take a keen and continued interest in the Daily. I would ask all those who will return next year, and who are journalistically inclined, to endeavour to devote some of their time towards making our daily paper even a greater success than it has been this session.

The Rugby Club has made an appeal for material to which I hope the response will be gratifying.

In addition to this club, other collegiate and inter-collegiate sports will be claiming your support. Please give it to the utmost of your ability. Remember that, although study is the most important duty which you have to perform here, there are other things also connected with college life and activities which should claim your attention and which would be to your profit.

McGill's record in sport and in other matters during this session has been an excellent one, but with everybody's wholehearted help I feel, that for McGill, the session of 1919-20 will be a red-letter one.

W. C. NICHOLSON,
President Students' Council.

NOTICES

Returned Medical Smoker.

The executive of the Returned Medical Undergraduate Association desires to point out that the invitation extended to the returned undergraduates of the several faculties for the informal smoker at the Ritz, on Monday next, applies only to those undergraduates who are duly accredited members of the returned men's associations of Science, Arts, Law and Medicine.

Mandolin Club.

The Mandolin Club has been engaged to play at an entertainment to be held in the Sunday School of St. James Methodist Church, corner of St. Catherine and City Councilors Street, on Thursday evening, April 10th, at 8.15 o'clock.

"Trial by Jury," a comic opera by Gilbert and Sullivan, will be presented, and the Mandolin Club has been asked to open up proceedings, and to play later on during an interval in the programme.

The club has been invited to remain for supper after the performance.

Members are requested to be on hand at 8.00 sharp with mandolins and music. The entrance to the Sunday School is on City Councilors Street.

tion for the erection of a university, one of the colleges to be named McGill College. After his death on the 19th December, 1813, protracted litigation ensued with the residuary legatee, Mr. Desrivieres, who was to receive the bequest if the main object could not be carried out. The decision of the Court of Appeals of Lower Canada, rendered in April, 1826, confirming the decision of the lower court, maintained the validity of the will as to the university. There were two suits, Desrivieres and Richardson (Stuart's Reports, 218), and Royal Institution vs. Desrivieres (same, p. 224), Privy Council, 1828.

Some delay took place before the Royal Institution got possession of the property and the money, which was received with interest in 1835, and then amounted to something over £22,000. Building began in 1839, and was ready for students on the 7th September, 1843. The first principal was the Rev. John Bethune, later dean of the English Church, Montreal.

The Medical Faculty had already begun its work, and degrees in Medicine were granted as early as 1841. The first degrees in Law were in 1843, when Hon. William Badgley, and the Rev. F. J. Lundy received the honorary degree of D.C.L. The first graduates as B.C.L. were in 1850, the recipients being Brown Chamberlin, William Busby Lambie, Christopher C. Abbott and Alexander Morris, the last named having taken his B.A. in 1849.

Besides the legal and financial difficulties already mentioned, further difficulties arose from the dual authority vested in the Royal Institution and in the university corporation, which had been erected by writ of the Privy Seal, dated at Westminster, 31st March, 1821, into a corporation under the name of The Governor, Principal and Fellows of McGill College, the first branches being a Chair of Divinity and two professors in Arts. An amended charter was obtained in 1852, all tests and rules which characterized the university as belonging to one religious denomination being abolished. In 1853 the Governors were able to announce that arrangements for carrying on the work were complete. It was at this stage that the Faculty of Law was formed, and it was to consist of at least two professors, and such lectures as might be necessary to afford liberal and thorough instruction to students of that profession. The first members were: The Hon. William Badgley, D.C.L., dean of the Faculty; J. J. C. Abbott, B.C.L., and F. W. Torrance, A.M., lecturers.

The first rules and regulations were published in the Calendar for 1854-55, and they provided for a full course of legal education for students intended for the Bar of Lower Canada. Courses were established of Public Law and Common Law, with occasional illustrations from foreign jurisprudence. The ordinary course to be of three years, but students in the fourth year of their indentures might qualify for the degree in two years. The lectures were in Criminal Law; the law of the tenure of real estate; Civil Law; the law of contracts; and practice of the courts. Instruction to be by recitations, examinations, oral lectures, and expositions daily during the term.

Of the three original members, the following is a brief account: The Hon. William Badgley was born in 1801, his father being elected in that year as representative of Montreal in the Provincial Assembly. He, himself, was called to the Bar in 1823, and was made Q.C. in 1847. The honorary degree of D.C.L. had been conferred on him in 1843. He had done some useful work with the Hon. George Moffat, in the Constitutional Association of Montreal, and was appointed Commissioner in Bankruptcy in 1844, then judge of the Circuit Court, which office he resigned about 1847, and resumed practice, also representing, at first, Missisquoi, and afterwards Montreal, in the Legislative Assembly. In 1855 he was named Judge of the Superior Court, and in 1862 was removed to the Queen's Bench, first as assistant, then as puisne judge, which office he filled with great acceptance from 1866 till 1874, when he retired, and was consulting counsel for some years after till his death, 24th December, 1888, at the age of 88 years. Before his appointment in 1854 as Dean of the Faculty, he had been attorney-general in 1847-48. On his appointment as Judge of the Superior Court in 1855 his mantle as Dean of the Faculty fell on one of the two first lecturers, afterwards professors; his successor being John J. C. Abbott, who was born at St. Andrews, P.Q., in 1821, a son of the Rev. Joseph Abbott, M.A., who had come to Canada in 1818. Mr. Abbott was called to the Bar in 1847, and received the degree of B.C.L. in McGill in 1854, at the time of his appointment as lecturer. He was prominent as an authority on commercial law, and was the author of the first bankruptcy law, the Act of 1864, which Mr. Pyke, the veteran deputy prothonotary of the Superior Court, told the writer was the best bankruptcy act that had been in force. From 1859 Mr. Abbott represented his native county, Argenteuil, in the Legislature, and in 1862 became solicitor-general in the administration of John Standfield Macdonald, and Mr. Scott. His future life is part of the history of Canada. It was he who drafted the bill embodying the charter of the Canadian Pacific Railway; he became a senator of Canada, and leader of the Senate; then, on the death of Sir John A. Macdonald, was prime minister of Canada, till he resigned on account of delicate health, being succeeded by Sir John Thompson. Sir Charles Tupper, the natural successor of Sir John, was absent at the postal convention in Vienna, and took the premiership only at a later date, after the death of Sir John Thompson, and the tenure of Sir Mackenzie Bowell. As dean of the Faculty of Law in McGill, he continued to fulfill his duties as professor of commercial law, until he resigned, being succeeded by William H. Kerr, D.C.L., Q.C., an eminent member of the Bar.

The other original member of the staff at its organization was Frederick William Torrance, A.M., born at Montreal 16th July, 1823, son of John Torrance, a successful merchant. He was educated at the college of Nicolet in this province, and in Edinburgh, Scotland, graduating as A.M. of the University of Edinburgh in 1844. One of the lawyers under whom he studied was the Hon. James Smith, who became a distinguished judge. Mr. Torrance was called to the Bar in 1848, was made Q.C. in 1867, and raised to the Bench as Judge of the Superior Court in 1868. He was one of the founders of the Lower Canada Jurist, and its editor for four years. He was professor of Civil, that is of Roman Law, from 1864 to 1870. His degree of B.C.L. was granted in 1856. He was a governor of the university from 1870 till his death. Judge Torrance was one of the incorporators of the Fraser Institute, along with Mr. Abbott, Peter Redpath, Thomas Workman and Alexander Molson. He was an active member of Free Church, Cote street, established in 1844, in sympathy with the disruption movement of the Free Church of Scotland in 1843, and was identified with many philanthropic and religious institutions.

Shortly after the formation of the faculty, there was added to the staff the Hon. Judge Aylwin, senior to the original lecturers, and for some years he gave lectures in public or constitutional law. He was born in Quebec in 1806, of Welsh and Irish parentage, called to the Bar in 1828; as a supporter of the Opposition in the Legislature, in which also John Neilson, of the Quebec Gazette, was prominently engaged, but withdrew when the leaders resorted to rebellion. Mr. Aylwin was elected for Portneuf in 1841 after the Union Act came into force, was solicitor-general in 1842-43, represented the City of Quebec for a short time; was raised to the Bench in 1848 as a Judge in the Court of Queen's Bench; removed to Montreal in 1850, continued to serve as a distinguished judge till 1867, when he retired, and died in October, 1871.

The Faculty was also enlarged shortly afterwards by the addition of Mr. P. R. LaFrenaye, a profound lecturer on bibliography and French law; and the Hon. Toussaint A. Rodolphe Laflamme, who had a very brilliant career, reaching the position of Minister of Justice in the ministry of Hon. Alexander Mackenzie, in 1876.

In November, 1855, the new principal took office and delivered his inaugural discourse. This was John William Dawson, M.A., of Edinburgh, who had already distinguished himself as a leader in educational organization and reform in his native province of Nova Scotia, and one who had been recommended to the governors by Sir Edmund Head, the Governor-General, and visitor of the university, as a man who appeared to possess the many qualities requisite for such a position. An account of the negotiations that led to this appointment was given many years after, in an address to the convocation of McGill by the Hon. Christopher Dunkin, one of the governors, presiding at the closing exercises, somewhere in the seventies. The promise then held out was amply fulfilled, and no greater citizen of Canada has appeared than Dr. Dawson, who later on became president of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, and was one of the first on whom the honor of knighthood was conferred.

In 1857 the Hon. Charles Dewey Day was named chancellor of the University, which office he held with dignity and distinction for many years. Mr. Abbott, who became afterwards Dean of the Faculty of Law by William H. Kerr, born at Quebec, in 1826. His father was J. Hastings Kerr, a land agent in Quebec; his grandfather had settled in Quebec in 1797, when he was appointed Judge of the Court of Vice-Admiralty; and in 1808 was made a Judge of the King's Bench; was an executive councillor in 1812; a member of the Legislative Council in 1821. William H. Kerr, our dean, was educated at Dr. Lundy's School in Quebec, and at Queen's University, Kingston. As a student of law he had been in the office of Mr. Stuart, afterwards Sir Andrew Stuart, chief justice. Came to Montreal, and created Q.C. in 1873, and received the degree of D.C.L. from McGill the same year. He acted most acceptably as Dean of the Faculty, and as professor of international law; was batonnier of the Bar in 1878, and died 12th February, 1888. He was succeeded by Norman W. Trenholme, who had been professor of Roman law, from the date of the retirement of Judge Torrance. Mr. Trenholme was the first winner of the Elizabeth Torrance gold medal, founded and endowed by Judge Torrance in memory of his mother, in 1865.

NORMAN WILLIAM TRENHOLME.

Dean of the Faculty of Law from 1888-1895.

Judge Trenholme, of the Court of King's Bench, is one of the very last surviving links with the old McGill of Sir William Dawson's day. Approaching eighty-two, he still takes the keenest interest in public affairs and more particularly in everything connected with McGill University.

Born in 1837, at Kingsley, Que., Norman William Trenholme is of old Yorkshire stock, his family holding land in Yorkshire, according to the Doomsday Book. With an insatiable thirst for knowledge, the young man came into our university from the country, and carried all before him. It is doubtful if any student ever went through the university with such a brilliant record which can be confirmed by reference to the McGill Year Books. He took the Henry Chapman gold medal in 1863, and the Elizabeth Torrance gold medal in 1865. This same year he was admitted to the Bar and started on the ascending ladder of fame. In 1888 he was batonnier of the Bar, and in 1888-9 Crown Prosecutor. He was Professor of Roman and Public Law at McGill from 1868 to 1888, and then for thirteen years dean. During these years many promising young men passed through his classes and he has never ceased to take an interest in their careers.

Throughout his long life at the Bar Judge Trenholme pursued an unflinching course of the highest integrity. A somewhat austere man, his chief interests were his profession, public affairs of Canada and his family. He was twice married, the first time to Lucy Wilkes Hedge, of old New England stock, and the second time to Grace Low Shaw, daughter of Robert Shaw, of Quebec.

In 1901 he was appointed to the Superior Court, and three years later raised to the Court of King's Bench. Sir Wilfrid Laurier was an old friend and college mate of Judge Trenholme's, and the Judge has a letter from him, which he greatly prizes, in reply to one of thanks for his appointment. In this Sir Wilfrid says that he simply confirms an appointment made by public opinion, which justly ranks Judge Trenholme in the very forefront of legal knowledge in Canada.

During the past four years Judge Trenholme has followed every step of the Great War with unflinching interest, all the more so as he was one of the few men who talked in vain for many years of the German menace, which he plainly foresaw. In the twilight of his days he can look back at a long and wonderfully creditable life.

After the resignation of Dr. Trenholme, the Board of Governors appointed Leonidas Heber Davidson as acting dean, he being the senior professor on the staff, and a distinguished member of the Bar. He was born at Toronto in 1842, educated at St. John's High School and at Missisquoi High School, a graduate of Bishop's College, Lennoxville, and afterwards in Arts and Law at McGill. He took his B.A. in McGill in 1863, his B.C.L. in 1864, in which year he was called to the Bar. He had acted as counsel with Mr. Joseph Douthé before the Privy Council, and was appointed professor in the Faculty in succession to Hon. Mr. Justice Wurtelle, to the Chair of Criminal Law. He was made Queen's Counsel in 1887. He filled the office of dean till the definitive appointment, which was already under consideration, of Mr. Walton as dean of the faculty. Mr. Frederick Parker Walton took office on the 31st August, 1897. Born at Buxton, England, in 1858, he graduated B.A., Lincoln College, Oxford, LL.B. at Edinburgh; and also studied at Marburg. Was called to the Scottish Bar in 1886, was lecturer in Glasgow University in Roman Law; and secretary to the Lord Advocate of Scotland in 1894. In McGill, he was professor of Roman Law, and represented McGill University at the celebration at Marischal College, Aberdeen, in 1906, receiving the honorary degree of LL.D. from Aberdeen. Having been invited to take a temporary position in Cairo, Egypt, he was granted leave of absence by the governors; and was then offered and accepted the position of legal adviser to the Khedive, which office he still holds.

His successor was the present dean, Robert Warden Lee, M.A., B.C.L., a graduate in 1894 of Oxford. Balliol College, coming to us from University College, London, where he was professor of Roman-Dutch Law from 1906. He was admitted as a barrister at Gray's Inn in 1896. A fellow and vice-provost of Worcester College, Oxford, and has had wide and varied experience, both in England and in the dominions over the seas, having been engaged as a magistrate in the Civil Service in Ceylon, as an advocate in the Transvaal, South Africa; and was also an examiner in the Final School of Jurisprudence in Oxford, and has done valuable historical and literary work. His published works include one on the Law of Contracts, 1906-7, in Mr. E. Jenks's Digest of English Civil Law, and various contributions to the Journal of Comparative Legislation. Since coming to McGill he has published articles in the Harvard Law Review, in the Yale Law Journal, in the Canadian Law Times, Toronto, and has acted as chairman for two years in succession of the Committee on Law Studies of the Canadian Bar Association. In our own faculty, he has lectured on Roman Law, on Constitutional Law, and certain other branches; and has put the work of the faculty on a sound and progressive basis, affording wider scope to its students, and helping to realize the ideals proposed in the original formation of the faculty.

Among the winners of the Elizabeth Torrance gold medal, there have been seven judges, four members of Parliament, and of the Legislature, and three of our own professors.

We have seen that the college buildings were opened for classes in September, 1843. And as there is no statement in the records accessible to the writer to the contrary, it may be assumed that the early lectures of the faculty were delivered in the college buildings. In 1860 they were transferred to the former residence of the founder, Burnside farm, or Burnside Hall, a substantial farm-house built of solid stone, with a sloping roof, such as we may still see in many of the best of the old houses in the province. The site was a few feet above what is now Burnside street, behind the bookshop of Miss Poole, on the corner of McGill College avenue.

Another change took place in October, 1871, when, for the convenience of both the professors, who are all practising lawyers, and of the students, who are under indenture, and in attendance at the offices, it was thought that a place of meeting in the centre of the city might be preferable. The top storey of the Molson's Bank Building was placed at the disposal of the faculty, and the lectures were delivered there during the main part of the deanship of Dr. Kerr.

After the Macdonald endowment in 1890, and the very considerable additions that were then made to the library of the faculty, it was resolved to move to more commodious quarters; and the opportunity presented itself of securing the use of part of the building now occupied by the Fraser Institute, which had been originally on the border line of properties composing the Burnside farm, and on which a building had been erected as the second home of the High School of Montreal. That school had itself been administered as a department of McGill College, at which time it was held in the building on Belmont street, occupied till recently as the McGill Normal School, the new building of the High School having replaced it, till it moved first to Metcalfe street, and more recently to upper University street. The Faculty of Law occupied the room on the corner of University and Dorchester streets, and one of the large rooms upstairs, in which the library was installed. It also controlled the large room on the ground floor, now a reading-room of the Fraser Institute.

The valuable library of Judge Torrance had been left to the Fraser Institute, of which he had been one of the governors; and an arrangement was made between the University and the Institute, by which the law books in that connection were to be added to those in possession of the faculty as recently enlarged; and the whole have since been placed in the Redpath Library Building. Another addition to these just mentioned are the books left by the late Frederick Griffin, Esq., Q.C., a leading lawyer in his time, and for many years solicitor to the Bank of Montreal.

Still later, in 1895, in pursuance of the policy of the University to try to combine the members of all the faculties into something more closely approaching distinctive university life, it was resolved to move the faculty of law to the main building, the part formerly occupied as a residence of the principal, in the time of Sir William Dawson, being assigned to the law department. This place being now deemed better adapted to the work of some other department, it was found possible to supply more suitable and commodious quarters for the faculty, and the building now being altered to meet its requirements will be a great improvement over any of the localities previously occupied for the work of the law school, giving facilities not only for lecture-rooms, but for other useful branches of the present and future wants of the department of law.

SOCIETE FRANCAISE GIVES FRENCH PLAY

"Les Deux Timides," by Lebiche, is Presented in the R.V.C.

It has been the custom of the Societe Francaise of the R.V.C. to produce a play every year, the proceeds of which are to be devoted to some French charity or movement. This year the society decided to give a performance of Lebiche's charming comedy, "Les Deux Timides"; and last Saturday afternoon a very appreciative audience gathered in the Common Room to enjoy the play.

The following members of the society took part:
Melle. Touren The Old Father
Miss Shattford. The Charming Heroine
Miss Abbott The Hero
Miss Monk A Dandy, The Villain
Miss D. Sharples A Maid

All the performers played their parts so well that it is difficult to decide who was the best, but the character which is naturally worthy of most praise was the shy old father. He was so natural that one instinctively wanted to help him out. His charming young daughter did come to his rescue and she and her bashful fiancé are worthy of special mention, both for their dramatic power and for their fluent, easy command of the French language. The villain made the most of a colourless part and what little one saw of the maid made one feel the society may look to the year '22 for support on future "dramatic" occasions.

If the financial results of the afternoon's entertainment prove as successful as the performance itself the committee should feel amply repaid for all their trouble.

AT THE SHOW

THE IMPERIAL.

The picture, "Alias, Mike Morgan," shown at the Imperial this week, features Wallace Reid in the name part. Larry Young, in reality a poor clerk, poses as a young man of the leisure class and possessed of unlimited wealth. He falls in love with a girl whom he believes to be the daughter of a rich shipowner. The plot turns on the remarkable likeness of a jailbird, Mike Morgan, to himself. Having met his double in unique circumstances, Young learns Morgan's wish to serve his country, which is deterred by his having served in prison. Young upon an inspiration plans to evade the draft, for which he has been selected, by the impersonation of Mike, whom he pays to take his place. However, this results in so many complications that Young finally determines to enlist. He is wounded at the front, and his long lost girl, who is relieving orphans in France, comes to see him under the impression that he is Mike Morgan. Explanations ensue, and it develops that the girl is not the daughter but the maid of the shipowner. The last scene shows wife and husband, now recognizing the truth about each other, settled down in America.

A very fantastic Mutt and Jeff picture, a Ford travelogue and the 8th episode of the Houdini Serial complete the programme.

There is also some excellent music, including several orchestral selections, and Miss Price's violin solos. Miss Ruth Bartlett, a soprano, sings.

CAMPUS LEADERS

VALEDICTORIAN OF ARTS '19.

A. S. NOAD.

Algy S. Noad was born at Lachine, just 252 months ago. Shortly after that time he began to take an interest in Greek and English, and amused himself with both during the years which he spent at the Montreal High School. In October, 1915, he entered McGill as an Honour student in Greek and English.

Noad has always taken a keen interest in journalism, and has been Editor-in-Chief of the "Daily" for two years. He was also president of '19 last session, and has this year been elected valedictorian.

He is known to hundreds about the University as "A. S." and is generally to be found in the Library, fortified by a dozen massive volumes.

His pet aversion is collecting his acquaintances' handwriting. "Tis said, too, that he is greatly interested in subjects more modern than Greek.

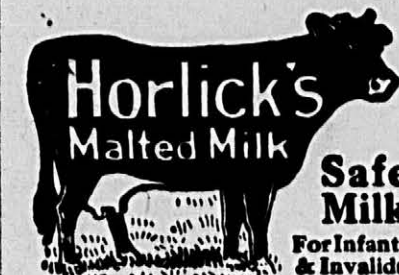

'RED' MULLOCK ONE OF OUR BEST AIRMEN

"In one case he took the ringleader of the rioters into his room alone. Half an hour later the malefactor volunteered for the demobilization staff and has been working like a Trojan ever since, explaining to his comrades the difficulties besetting the British Government, and how everything possible was being done."

At college they used to call him "Red Mullock." When he came to the war in 1914 his English confreres called him "Canada" Mullock, and it stuck.

"If Canada," continues the despatch, "allows Colonel Mullock to be retained in England, she will lose the services of one of the shrewdest and most imaginative flying men of Great Britain, an officer who has won his spurs as an intrepid fighter before promotion removed him from the fighting pilots; although even when in command of a group he used to steal across the lines alone and seek out the erstwhile Boche. But what is more important, Mullock possesses the confidence of every Canadian who ever flew a machine."
